++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
A sunny and mild day.

Today:
A frosty and foggy start for some, but quickly warming through the morning due to clear skies and plenty of sunshine. Some breezy conditions developing, but a warm day ahead regardless. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Tonight:
Turning cloudy in the late evening with rain pushing in from the north by dawn. Winds increase through the small hours, with risks of coastal gales. Some rural frosts developing. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Monday:
Frequent sunny spells but a rather cool day ahead. Windy with occasionally sleet showers, particularly in the southwest and a widespread frost developing overnight. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Cold with risks of frosts through this period. Sunny spells on Tuesday with sleet showers, particularly in the west and near coasts. Less frequent showers Wednesday. Rain on Thursday.
